SECRETARY WILSON'S PLAN TO NEGOTIATE NATION-WIDE
SCALE ACCEPTED BY MINERS*Their Unqualified Agreement
Announced By Acting
President Lewis.*OPERATORS FIGHTING SHY*Employers Urge Return to Old Policy of Allowing Basic Scale to Be Negotiated By Operators and Miners in Central Competitive Field.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Acceptance without qualification by the mine workers of Secretary of Labor Wilson's proposal for negotiation of a nation-wide wage scale agreement, was announced at the conference today by John L. Lewis, acting president of the United Mine Workers of America.

Speaking on behalf of operators outside the central competitive field, F. W. Lukings, president of the Southwestern Interstate Coal Operators association, proposed returning to the old policy of allowing the basic scale to be negotiated by the operators and miners in the central competitive field.

After long and acrimonious operators and miners in conference agreed to take up settlement of wage and labor conditions in the central competitive field after they had failed to agree on considering a national scale as first proposed.

When faced with the refusal of the mine operators to make an agreement on a national basis, President Lewis of the mine workers, and Paul H. Penna, for the operators, finally agreed to proceed with negotiations covering the central competitive field.

Operators from districts outside the central competitive field will meet at the same hour to determine whether the agreement arrived at by the wage scale committee of the central field will be accepted as a basis for the contract in the outlying districts.

Adjourning the general conference Secretary Wilson then summoned the wage scale committee of the central field to meet at 2:30 P. M. today to negotiate a new wage agreement.

SECRETARY WILSON SAYS MINERS WANT TOO MUCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 14.—Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson today opened the conference of the bituminous coal operators and miners by admonishing them that they must reach an agreement in the public interest. He informed the miners that their demand for a six-hour day and five-day week was "impossible" and should be eliminated, and that their demand for a 50 per cent wage increase is equally impossible.

As flatly told the operators that their "stand-pat" attitude is impossible, and that although their wartime contract with the miners is still legally in effect, regardless of its terms, the miners are entitled to relief proportionate to the increased cost of living they have had to meet.

The Secretary laid a definite plan before the two sides, his program including the adoption of one of the three following proposals:

First, negotiation through joint wage scale committees, representing all districts; second, negotiation through concurrent session of committees from the various districts; and, third, negotiation first of an agreement in the central competitive field and then of agreements for other fields with that of the central district as a basis.

Both sides took under consideration this plan, revolutionary in the mining industry, of broadening the scope of the wage conference, and went into separate meetings after Secretary Wilson had recessed the public joint session to 10 A. M. tomorrow.

Miners, following their meeting, announced through Acting President John L. Lewis and Secretary William A. Green of the United Mine Workers of America that they had reached a decision, but would give their answer first to Secretary Wilson tomorrow morning. It had been expected the miners would not be unfavorable to the extension plan.

Operators, after their conference, said they had reached no determination, and would confer further. The talk among operators was not friendly to the secretary's broad conference proposal.

UNAUTHORIZED STRIKES
CASE 15 W. V. MINES
CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 15.—Several hundred miners employed in two large mines near Clifton left their work today when a delegation of striking miners from Mifflin, a nearby camp, appeared at the pit and urged them to "strike."

Despite the prediction of union leaders that men would return to work today it became known that other unauthorized strikes were in progress at Ramapo, Milburn and Blair and that no less than 15 mines were closed.

Reports reaching the office of the Kanawha Coal Operators' association here were to the effect that less than 50 per cent of the mines were in operation and at most of the mines the working force was far below normal.

LONG FLIGHT FAILS*Handley-Page Bomber Forced to Descend at Mount Jewett, Pa.

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Handley-Page airplane, which started early yesterday from Mincola on what was intended to be a non-stop flight to Chicago, descended at Mount Jewett, Pa., in the afternoon. Vice Admiral Mark Kerr, commanding the plane, dispatched this telegram at 4:30 o'clock:

"Water trouble probably due to the intense cold weather necessitated landing here. Hope to continue on to Cleveland Saturday."

MOUNT JEWETT, Pa., Nov. 15.—Conditions being good, Vice Admiral Kerr, commanding the Handley-Page airplane which left Mincola yesterday for Chicago and was compelled to land here, will take the air again this afternoon for Cleveland. There a supply of oil and gasoline will be taken on and if the weather holds, the flight to Chicago will be continued. The machine made good time all the way from Mincola until a point two miles east of here was reached. There it was discovered that a water connection had gone bad and a landing was effected. Work on repairs was commenced as soon as possible.

An hour will be taken up with the journey to Cleveland. It will land at the Glenn Martin flying field.

NAB 12 I. W. W.*Members of Local Near Morgantown Apprehended By Federal Agents.

By Associated Press.
MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 15.—Department of Justice agents with eight deputy sheriffs today arrested 12 members of the Scotts Run local of the I. W. W.

They were brought here and placed in jail.

Search of the quarters occupied by the men revealed the presence of large quantities of I. W. W. literature. Some of the pamphlets denounced the United Mine Workers as a "machine ridden, master dominated organization" and declared the I. W. W. invincible because of its "revolutionary" policy.

The authorities said that for three months or more copies of the pamphlets seized have been circulated in the mining region of this section. Records at the Star City express office showed they have been distributed at a rate of 500 a week for months. They were consigned to the leaders of the I. W. W. all of whom are Russians and who the sheriff's office believes are now in jail.

phony Orchestra Succumbs.

Paper Goes to Three Cents.
OIL CITY, Nov. 15.—The Derrick yesterday announced an increase in the price of the daily edition to three cents a copy. The previous rate was two cents. The announcement of the increase states: "No change will be made in subscription rates at this time, but from the present outlook caused by the scarcity and high prices of print paper, it may be necessary not only to increase advertising and subscription rates, but also to limit the size of the paper within the near future." The increase will take effect November 17.

SHORT WORKING HOURS A PERIL,
MACKAY DECLARES*Head of Compensation Board
Appeals to Labor to Avoid Threatened Pitfalls.*TOO MUCH LEISURE BAD

HARRISBURG, Nov. 15.—Harry A. Mackay, chairman of the Pennsylvania Workmen's Compensation Board, today issued the following appeal to labor:

"Massachusetts has recorded her verdict couched in the language and pitched to the temper of the nation. The leaders of labor ought to take notice of the fact that, without respect to party, distinguished men from all the states are heralding the election of Governor Coolidge, as a vindication of right and justice and an assurance of the stability of our people and the perpetuation of the Republic.

"America's citizenship has acclaimed the result of the Massachusetts election as establishing the fact that American democracy shall survive, that class shall not prevail over class, and that one group of citizens, in mistaken zeal, shall not imperil the rights of the whole.

"The verdict of the people of Massachusetts is also universally accepted as a guarantee that might is not right, and that the rules of conduct of a small group shall not be substituted for the fundamental law of the land.

"The result in this election also proclaims that America is still the great melting pot of the world and that men of all grades of education, enlightenment, social relations and racial entanglements, will ever come out of this human caldron, real pillars of our democracy, acknowledging the supremacy of the law and recognizing the authority of properly constituted officials.

"Those in leadership of large groups of the working classes should consider, not so much the result of this election, as the temper of the American people. A hundred and more millions of people will be impatient with inconveniences, privation and suffering.

SUGAR 11 CENTS*One Local Store Asking Advanced Price Today.

One city store was selling sugar at 14 cents a pound today, notwithstanding the price of 11 cents fixed by the sugar equalization board. It was predicted that 18 cents would be the prevailing rate before long. Some stores have not had sugar for weeks. People will pay any price to get it, it is said, hence the advance.

A maximum wholesale price of 10½ cents a pound for all beet sugar at all points in the United States was established yesterday by the department of justice.

P. Bufano's Brother Dies.
Mauro Bufano, 45 years old, a brother of Pasquale Bufano, Connellsville banker, and a former resident of Connellsville, died this week at a New York hospital. The news was wired to Connellsville where Mr. Bufano was in New York and fled back to him there before he arrived at the home of the brother. $12.50 A MONTH PER PUPIL
IS PAY OF FORMER FAYETTE
GIRL NOW TEACHING IN OREGON

Twelve dollars and fifty cents ($12.50) a pupil per month, seems like a high rate of pay for a teacher, yet that's what Miss Inez Carroll of Dunbar, daughter of County Superintendent J. S. Carroll, gets. She has secured a rural school some 16 miles from Enterprise, Oregon, which pays $100 a month and has only eight pupils.

While on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Clara Carroll Victor of Oregon, Miss Inez fell in love with that state and decided to stay there. She had no trouble securing a position for teaching.

BID TOO HIGH, NEW ONES ARE ASKED FOR
NORMALVILLE ROAD*Will Be Opened About December 1 at Harrisburg; Local Firms to Submit Figures.

For the reason that they were considered excessive bids for the improvement of the Connellsville-to-Farmingville road will be re-advertised, according to work from the State Highway Department at Harrisburg. The new proposals will be opened about December 1. It is understood, and if the figures are such as to warrant awarding the contract the work will be started at once. Connellsville and Uniontown firms are expected to enter the bidding.

No local firms were represented in the bids opened October 31. MacArthur Brothers, New York, offered to excavate and pave the three miles from Connellsville to the Sherburne place for $268,150.80 or nearly $90,000 a mile. This was considered unreasonable at Harrisburg. It was the only bid filed. W. H. Wilkey of Uniontown submitted a bid of $287,352.72 for the Farmington end of this route, known as No. 356, and extending 31.452 feet. This bid also was held up. It is understood.

Soon after the bids were opened and it was decided the figure named was too high efforts were exerted toward getting a number of contractors to submit proposals. A month will elapse between the opening of the first bids and the second, it is said.

HUSBAND FOR DESERTION

A man of 75 and his wife, 72, both from Connellsville, were principals in a desertion and non-support case in domestic relations court in Uniontown this morning. Mrs. Emma Beatty was the prosecutor and James Beatty the defendant.

According to the aged husband, they lived happily together until Mrs. Beatty evidenced a desire to become independent of a plant they owned near Mount Pleasant. Since then there had been several ill which resulted in separation.

Efforts at reconciliation last week failed because the wife refused to live in the Italian quarter of Connellsville. The husband owns property at Vandertail which produces an income of $500 above taxes and other expenses, but this is rented and not available.

It was agreed during the hearing that the husband should provide for the support of the woman until a home can be secured at which time the court expressed the hope that the happy relations of their younger days will be resumed.

LEGION MEN SWORN IN AS OFFICERS TO
MEET I. W. W. INVASION*Spokane Authorities Hear of Radicals' Concentration at Mining Town.

By Associated Press.
SPOKANE, WASH., Nov. 15.—Members of The American Legion were being sworn in as special policemen last night to meet what was declared to be an invasion of 1,000 to 2,000 members of the Industrial Workers of the World from Montana and other parts of the Northwest.

Orders for the mobilization of the two companies of the National Guardsmen were issued by Maj. Thomas G. Aston. Fifty-two Industrial Workers of the World taken in raids yesterday were convicted yesterday of criminal syndicalism.

Authorities heard that a concentration of I. W. W. was being attempted at Cumberland, an isolated mining town in King county.

All I. W. W. suspects are to be arrested according to an agreement reached at a conference between city and county officers and representatives of the American Legion.

Officers of The American Legion told the public officials they had received authentic reports that I. W. W. are en route here. All incoming trains, they said, are loaded with members of the organization and reports have been received from lumber camps in this region that I. W. W. are leaving their jobs to go to Spokane.

Eight local members of The American Legion were threatened with the fate of former soldiers killed at Centralia. Tuesday in a letter received at local American Legion headquarters through the mail. With 58 alleged members of the Industrial Workers of the World in the local jail charged with criminal syndicalism, police officers seized a quantity of radical literature said to amount to nearly a ton.

What the police believe was the backbone of a German Soviet war, the document, they declared, in the arrest of C. K. Quest, who is being held for investigation. Orders forbidding "workers' meetings" called for Saturday and Sunday evenings at Turner Hall were sent directors of the German government by the Department of Public Safety.

WINE MAKERS WORRIED*No Permits for Home-Made Beverage Issued Since July 1.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 15.—Three good reasons why manufacturers of home-made wine have a right to look worried were given Friday at the office of Internal Revenue Collector C. G. Lowellyn in the Federal building. Since July 1 no permits have been issued for home wine-making, though until that date it had been possible to obtain a permit from Mr. Lowellyn, giving one the right to make more than 200 gallons of wine for the use of any one family.

Wine made since July 1 if it comes under the keen eye of a revenue agent, subjects its owners practically to a triple penalty. The government tax on such wine must be paid, the wine will be confiscated and the owner is subject to prosecution and heavy penalties.

Government officials in Pittsburgh unabashedly declared yesterday that wine-making in the home is illegal, has been since July 1, and that owners of such stock are liable to arrest and their product to confiscation.

The part of the prohibition enforcement law prohibiting the keeping of whisky or other intoxicants in a business place or anywhere except in a private residence, provided it is not kept for sale, does not become effective until January 16, according to information from Mr. Lowellyn's office yesterday. For this reason, it is said, there is nothing to prevent Pittsburgh dealers keeping their stocks of wine goods in their places of business, so long as they sell none of it and offer none of it for sale.

It is regarded as probable that a good deal of wine has been made in homes of the Pittsburgh district since July 1, but if so the evaders of the law have taken a long chance and may find themselves in the toils, according to several federal officials here.

SUE FOR $20,000*Parents of Peter J. O'Connor Seek Damages of Railroad.

Suit was filed in Uniontown today by Frank and Mary O'Connor of Connellsville for $20,000 damages for the death of their son, Peter J. O'Connor, who was killed by a Pennsylvania railroad train at the West Side crossing, March 13, 1919. O'Connor was in an automobile which was struck by a special train of Superintendent J. T. Morrow.

SHORT WORKING HOURS A PERIL, MACKAY DECLARES

ing brought to their doors by small groups which seek by force and the infliction of suffering, to bring about a readjustment of their real or imaginary grievances.

"My appeal is to the thoughtful, red blooded, honest, homelike workman of our state. He ought to stop and assert the independence and sovereignty of his own individual self, before he blindly allows others to precipitate him into a situation that is going to bring suffering and privation to the homes of all our people, his own included, and with the temper of the people as it now is, will render his organization impotent for future usefulness to himself and his fellow workmen.

"In my intimate relationship with the workmen of Pennsylvania, I know how the individual workman feels. I know of no substantial bread winner in Pennsylvania who, prompted by his own judgment, would cease, at this time, to do a man's part. Now is the time for such men to stop and consider how far they will follow an irrational and un-American leadership. The workmen of Pennsylvania ought to continue at the task of production at this crisis, for a number of reasons.

"It is every man's duty at this time to work as he never worked before. This is no time for ties in offices or in the mines or in the factories to limit the amount of work that they can do. A situation is upon us all that has grown out of abnormal conditions, and I know nothing that will solve all our problems as much as constant and untiring labor. This applies to the men in the offices, mines, mills, upon the farms and in every walk of life. It is unpatriotic for any of us, yes, unworthy of our manhood, to seek to escape long and arduous hours of toil. When we all make up our minds to do this, many of the problems that now seem impossible of solution, will solve themselves.

"As a matter of fact we have too many leisure hours. Men, while idle, spend money foolishly. They rush into extravagances that they would never dream of were their minds bent upon their tasks and their spirits consumed by the desire to produce much. In my judgment the real solution of the problem of the high cost of living is to work and work and produce and produce.

"More than this, with our minds all bent upon our tasks, and striving each one to excel the other in our production, we will have no time to allow our minds to wander from the fundamentals of our democracy—the agitator will be passed up as a public menace, and all will be happy and contented in activity."

Only a Cold.

Are you ill? It often answers—"Oh, it's only a cold." As if a cold was a matter of little consequence, but people are beginning to learn that a common cold is a matter not to be trifled with, that some of the most serious diseases start with a cold. As soon as the first indication of a cold appears take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Remember that the sooner you get rid of your cold the less danger, and this remedy will help you to throw it off.—Adv.

Whose Word is Better Than Your Druggist's?

Physicians, Dentists and Nurses Rely on Him—Isn't That Sufficient Reason for Public Confidence?

There are many good reasons for the confidence the public repose in the druggist. First, he is educated to know by four years of college and practical training. Second, all physicians everywhere rely implicitly on his skill—they trust him. This faith, of course, originates and is maintained by the professional service rendered by the druggist in filling prescriptions. Everyone admits this confidence when offering a prescription to a druggist.

Very few men can be honest in one department of their business and dishonest in the other. Dr. Jekel and Mr. Hyde exist very little in real life. If you trust your druggist to fill your prescription, therefore, in all fairness you must accept his word against the word of unknown and far distant manufacturers.

To recommend an article, the druggist must, of course, know what it contains and how it is made, and this was one reason for the formation of a co-operative national association of druggists and physicians who prepare a complete line of household remedies and toilet goods. This association is the American Druggists' Syndicate, a membership of 25,000 druggists and physicians, the largest of its kind in the world! For 19 years these professional men met annually for conference in order to obtain the best formulas for its products that the combined skill and experience of its members could produce. All these articles are non-secret, strictly ethical. The ingredients in all A. D. S. preparations conform to the standard advocated by the government, and cannot be excelled in quality. As the association is strictly co-operative, its merchandise is also sold at the very lowest prices possible for the quality. In Conneltsville there are 11 druggists who will tell you that A. D. S. Household Remedies, like Milk of Magnesia, Aspirin, Digestive Tablets, Perichin Tooth Paste, etc., are the best that they can find in all markets. These 11 druggists stand squarely behind every A. D. S. product with an unqualified guarantee and a hearty endorsement. Such a recommendation is the greatest that can obtain, based on the scientific knowledge of tens of thousands of experts and fulfilled by a man you know well and must trust implicitly—your druggist.

Whenever you need a household remedy or toilet article, ask an A. D. S. Druggist to recommend one to you. All A. D. S. Druggists identify themselves with prominent window or counter displays. Ask one about A. D. S. products. If you would trust him to fill your prescription, it's only fair to take his word about the merchandise he sells.—Adv.

MT. PLEASANT, Nov. 15.—Andy Probanky of Truener, who is employed in the mine at that place, had his left hand crushed yesterday and it was necessary to amputate one of his fingers when he was brought to the Memorial hospital here for treatment. An effort will be made to save the rest of the fingers.

Run Over by Pitt Wagon. Joseph Bussy, employed at the St. Clair works near Weylown, on Thursday had completed his day's work and just as he was leaving for home a pit wagon ran over his leg and fractured it. He was brought to the hospital here where the fracture was reduced and an effort will be made to save the leg.

NAZIMOVA in "THE BRAT"

THE SOISSON

"THE BRAT"—A tremendous screen presentation of a great stage triumph, with Nazimova, the greatest of all stars in the leading role, will be presented Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"The Brat" will show Nazimova for the first time in her brilliant career in the part of an American girl, Lavin and other foreign types had been considered Nazimova's meter; but she is said to amaze even her warmest admirers by her remarkable impersonation of the nameless waif of the streets around whom the dramatic action of "The Brat" revolves.

The vicissitudes and final triumph of "The Brat," a child-woman whose life has been on charitable institution after another until she lands in the chorus, forms the theme of Miss Nazimova's version of Maude Fulton's play. How the brat loses her job because she is too shabby to compete with the other girls, how she is later insulted and then taken to the Night Court on a rumped up charge; and how she is noticed by an author who takes her home to study her as the type for his new novel, are the beginnings of a romance that has a distinctly original flavor and is pungent with wit and satire.

Charles Bryant, who has been Nazimova's leading man in every one of her great screen vehicles save "The Red Lantern," again plays opposite the brilliant Russian star in the role of MacMillan Forrester, the author. Others in the splendid cast are Frank Currier, Henry Kolker, Darrell Foss, Amy Veness, Bonnie Hill, Millie Davenport and Elsiebeth Knott.

Among the spectacular and unusual settings provided for the production are an exact reproduction of the Night Court in New York and a fashionable theatre, which was built on the stage at the Nazimova studios especially for the picturization of "The Brat."

THE PARAMOUNT

"A MAN'S FIGHT"—Presenting Dustin Farnum, the popular star, in an interesting role, is today's feature attraction.

Roger Carr, of Aristocratic New York family, and man about town, detects Norman Evans, his on sister's suitor, cheating at cards at their club. That evening Carr comes suddenly upon Evans, half intoxicated, pressing over-zealous attention on Ethel in the drawing room of the Carr mansion. In the semi-darkness Evans is shot dead and a revolver is slid along the floor between Carr and his sister Ethel. Each believes the other fired the shot. Carr, though innocent, to save his sister makes no denial of the shooting. Clever lawyers get the sentence reduced to a short term of years in the penitentiary, and Carr goes to Sing Sing. Ethel becomes Sister Carmen, a nun in a western convent.

Emerging from the penitentiary on the expiration of his term, Carr is spurned by his patrician old father for the disgrace he has brought on the aristocratic family. With a manly man's determination to yet make good and win honor for the name he assumes Carr, under the alias of John Rand, goes to Colorado and makes a success as the industrial and political leader of the independent among the mine owners. He is openly courted by the daughter of the richest of the independents, and is secretly loved, too, by his pretty secretary, a young western girl of the worth-while type. Straining every effort to wreck Rand's impending triumph, his political foe stumbles up, his Sing Sing past. Fate grins in his face as for the second time it is on the point of making him an outcast, when in startling fashion the truth comes to light with the two women he adores, Sister Carmen and the little Secretary, as its medium, and forms a striking denouement to this Tom J. Geraghty fascinating story.

THE SOISSON.

"THE OTHER MAN'S WIFE"—An excellent production, affording entertainment for all classes, is being shown today.

Its moral is pointing, its lesson convincing and its presentation by a cast of capable players stand for all that is entertaining and instructive in the silent drama. As the proof of the pudding is in the eating, so the proof of the drama, whether spoken or silent, is in the seeing. After seeing, we find proof of the strongest entertainment value. It is absorbing throughout, for it exposes, one of the greatest evils that can befall married life and presents a situation that has ruined countless homes. It strikes home, whether there be happiness or unhappiness in the family. If it be happiness, then we are told what to avert; if it be unhappiness, then we are shown the way out of darkness into the light.

In addition to the stars, Stuart Holmes and Ellen Cassidy, there appear in this remarkable photodrama some of the most accomplished and talented actors, including Ned Ray, Olive Travon, Mrs. Carson, Louie Casey, Danny Sullivan, Regina Quinn, formerly of the Winter Garden show, Laura Newman, George Jessel and Gerald Brent, whom you will remember as leading woman for Lionel Barrymore in his first screen appearances under the Metro banner.

ARCADE THEATRE.

With midgets "Knee high to a duck" and a chorus of pretty petite girls, the Kusell Midget Follies will present possibly one of the best attractions ever seen in this city. The midgets are real artists, and the little people sing and dance and cut such capers that will keep the audience in a continual uproar throughout the entire performance. The company carries in addition to many others an Irish comedian, a Jew and a blackface that are a scream. Besides they have a strong man who performs some wonderful feats. The muscular development of this wonderful fellow is beyond imagination. The full-sized chorus adds a great deal to the attraction when must be seen to be appreciated. The show is playing the Dixie theatre, Uniontown, and from reports received from there it is the biggest hit in a long time. Audience composed of 10,000 women and children were found in their praise of this show at Uniontown, and undoubtedly it will attract a great number of women and children to the Arcade theatre when it plays this city. The performance takes a little over an hour which in addition to the usual pictures, and will comprise a good evening's entertainment.

A Cheerful Recommendation. "They should be in every travelling man's grip" writes Geo. Jenner, 418 Labor St., St. Antonio, Tex., of Foley Cathartic Tablets. "They are the best laxative I have taken and I cheerfully recommend them to anyone suffering with constipation or biliousness. They thoroughly cleanse the bowels, sweeten the stomach and benefit the liver. They correct indigestion, bad breath, bloating, gas, coated tongue and other results of sluggish bowels. No griping; no nausea. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

AIR LINE PASSENGER SAYS IT'S FINE, NO JAR OR JOLT, DUST OR SMOKE TO ANNOY ONE

How it feels to fly in the Lawson air liner which left on the Edwards farm at Broad Ford about a month ago, is described by Richard Wightman, vice president of the Aerial Towing Association, in a recent issue of the New York Times Magazine. After describing the preliminary to the actual "hopping off," Mr. Wightman tells of the green stretches of Mitchell Field, Mineola, falling away beneath the big bird. He continues:

"About this time one of the crew walked along the aisle tossing boxes of bon-bons into our laps exactly as the train boys of the old days used to do when we rode on the 'accommodation trains' which stopped at all the little stations. 'With a furtive glance through my celluloid window I took my box of candy and slowly broke the wrappings. It took me a long time to extract the first bon-bon. I didn't feel like making any quick motions. My legs were crossed and somehow it seemed better to keep them that way. If I shifted them, the thing might tip over and we'd all spit out! 'Occasionally the nose of the ship would tip up a little or down a little, but never so much as when your rowboat is going against the waves. 'As the plane rose higher and higher and the earth beneath looked like a patchwork quilt made apparently of green and yellow fields about the size of postage stamps, I tried to analyze my feelings, but they seemed normal, as there wasn't much to do in that direction to take up my time. Hence I began to write, and wrote until my fountain-pen was dry, occasionally looking out of my individual window at what was below and beyond; and there was no terror in it. 'My ease of mind was still furthered by the steady purr of the two 500-horsepower Liberty motors, the intermittent whirr of the propellers, and the smiles and amiable conversation of the passengers and crew who had gathered strangers and suddenly become friends by a lift into the sky. 'As we passed over New York City at a height of 5,000 feet it seemed something other than the largest city in the world. No longer was I walking along its cautions of commerce, hot and heated. I could not even see the canyons. They had apparently healed as wounds are healed, or been drawn together as seams are drawn in a finished garment. 'Occasionally some great building could be identified, but it was such a funny little building. I wondered if Mr. Rockefeller had ever seen his famous structure from my altitude. If he had, he must have laughed, for it resembled a toothpick, clean and white, just taken out of its box. And the great banks and financial institutions of Wall Street and lower Broadway, where were they? Oh, they were there all right—like the baby's building blocks in a nursery. The overgrown Bedford girl on the island of Liberty was there, too, as big as a penny doll. So far as size went, the big liners in the harbor could have been bought for 10 cents and pulled around in a tub by a thread. 'Over New Jersey the smokestacks of the great factories looked like rows of clay pipes stood on end, and smoking like fury with no man sucking them; the Princeton hotel was as a wedding ring; and the cemeteries patches of green velvet, on which some prodigal dentist had scattered his stock of nice, false teeth. 'This sort of journey gives one a feeling of superiority and independence. You have left all your little worries below. The important buildings and affairs of the earth over which you are passing seem very unimportant. You don't care what you are passing over. You don't care where the roads go or where the rivers run, or where the tracks are laid, for you are independent of them all. 'It was interesting to watch the passengers. What were they doing? Why, just what passengers do in Pullman parlor cars—chatting, reading magazines, knitting, writing, munching caramels, looking out the windows, walking up and down the aisle. One of the women carried up in her hair and went to sleep for an hour, and an air-traveling fly lit on her nose and tickled her into wakefulness but she soon dozed off again. 'As for me, I kept on with my writing. When going to Mineola in the early morning on the Long Island Railroad I had tried to do a little of it, but the train jiggled so much I had to give it up. On the air liner I had found that I could write as comfortably and legibly as in my own New England study, thus becoming, as it were, a pioneer in aerial authorship. 'And so we journeyed without jolt, jar or shock—no car-dust or smoke, no station waits, no heat or fret, no brushing off at the end of the trip, no porter to tip. I have traveled to Washington by train many times but never so quickly, comfortably and happily. 'From the time of our leaving Mineola till we arrived at Washington I didn't see a human being below engaged in a peaceful pursuit or any other kind of a pursuit. They must have been too little for me to see, for we passed over their farms and stores and some of them must have been around there somewhere."

WICKED EYES, NOT SHORT SKIRTS, MAKE THE MEN GO WRONG

Chairman of Women's Voters' League Defends Modern Style of Dress.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—That the length of a woman's skirt does not indicate just how dangerous that woman can be to mere man's peace of mind is the argument advanced by Mrs. James Lee Laddlaw, chairman of the State League of Women Voters, who addressed a large gathering of club women here Thursday. Mrs. Laddlaw spoke in reply to charges that have been uttered from the pulpit and from other sources, in which the speakers claimed the present-day dress of woman was "immoral and immodest," as well as several other things. "Modesty," said Mrs. Laddlaw, "does not lie in the length of the skirt nor the exhibition of an inch more or less of a feminine leg. A girl may wear skirts that sweep the ground and still be a menace from the look in her eye. Modesty and good manners are innate."

Answering the charge that it was hard to tell a "good" girl from the other kind these days, Miss Adelaide Sterling, secretary of the City League of Women Voters, said:

"There is nothing to worry the clergy in the women's dress of today. And if, as it is charged, it is so difficult to distinguish a member of a congregation from the women of the street, it indicates that the observer is guilty of one or two things: profound ignorance or profound spitefulness. If the girls skimmer up their hair and camouflage their nose, lift their skirts a few inches to the windy breezes, these are the extravagances of fantastic tastes that have always been the concomitant of the great struggle of history."

Mothers are largely to blame, according to the viewpoint of Mrs. Grace Strahan Forsythe, district superintendent of schools and president of the Interborough Association of Women Teachers. Said she:

"The great danger is to young girls from 14 to 20. It is pitiful to see them rouged and powdered and made up. I have heard men complain that it was once possible to tell a 'nice' girl, but that now they cannot 'separate the sheep from the goats.' 'The fault lies with the mothers. It must be that this is so. I have great praise for these schools that have placed restrictions on dress. One school requires that the dress reach from the ankles to the neck."

And as he sat among this company of the best minds of the town he felt that a new world was opening before him. His good clothes seemed to work up in some way through his subconscientiousness and gave him a sense of capability. He was in the mental atmosphere of men who did things, and by conforming to their customs he had brought his mind into harmony with theirs, so that it could receive suggestions, and—who knows?—return suggestions. And he was made to think, think, think.

CHAPTER V.

The summer was not far gone when Dave, through an introduction furnished by Mr. Duncan, got a new job. It was in the warehouse of a wholesale grocery, trundling cases and sacks of merchandise. It was cleaner than handling coal, and the surroundings were more congenial and the wages were better—fifty dollars a month to begin.

"The first thing is to get out of the deadline," said Mr. Duncan. "I am not hoping that you will have found destiny in a wholesale warehouse, but you must get out of the deadline. As long as you shovel coal you will shovel coal. And you are not capable of anything better until you think you are."

"But I've liked it pretty well," said Dave. "As long as I was just working for my money it was dull going, but it was different after I got to see that even shoveling coal was worth while. I suppose it is the same with groceries, or whatever one does. As soon as you begin to study what you handle, the work loses its drudgery. It isn't a man's job that makes him sick of his job; it's what he thinks of his job."

A light of satisfaction was in his teacher's eyes as Dave made this answer. Mr. Duncan had realized that he was starting late with this pupil, and if there were any short cuts to education he must find them. So he had set out deliberately to instill the idea that education is not a matter of schools and colleges, or courses of reading, or formulae of any kind, but a matter of the five senses applied to every experience of life. And he knew that nothing was more common than that passed through Dave's hands.

Dave's energy and enthusiasm in the warehouse soon brought him promotion from truck hand to shipping clerk, with an advance in wages to sixty-five dollars a month. He was prepared to remain in this position for some time, as he knew that promotion depends on many things—besides ability. Mr. Duncan had warned him against the delusion that man is entirely master of his destiny.

But Dave was not to continue in the grocery trade. A few evenings later he was engaged in reading in the public library. Mr. Duncan had directed him into the realm of fiction and poetry, and he was now feeling his way through "Hamlet." On the evening in question an elderly man engaged him in conversation.

"You are a Shakespearean student, I see?"

"Not exactly. I read a little in the evenings."

"I have seen you here different times. Are you well acquainted with the town?"

"Pretty well," said Dave, sensing that there might be a purpose in the questioning.

"Working now?"

Dave told him where he was employed.

"I am the editor of the Call," said the elderly man. "We need another man on the staff; a reporter, you know. We pay twenty-five dollars a week for such a position. If you are interested you might call at the office tomorrow."

Dave hurried with his problem to Mr. Duncan. "I think I'd like the work," he said, "but I am not sure whether I can do it. My writing is rather—wonderful."

Mr. Duncan turned the matter over in his mind. "Yes," he said at length, "but I notice you are beginning to use the typewriter. When you learn that God gave you ten fingers, not two, you may make a typist. And there is nothing more worth while than being able to express yourself in English. They'll teach you that on a newspaper. I think I'd take it."

"Not on account of the money," he continued, after a little. "You would probably soon be earning more in the wholesale business. No newspaper men are about the worst paid of all professions. But it's the best training in the world, not for itself but as a—"

BETTER DEAD

Life is a burden when the body is racked with pain. Everything worries and the victim becomes despondent and downhearted. To bring back the sunshine take to something else. The training is worth while, and it's the training you want. Take it."

Dave explained his disadvantages to the editor of the Call. "I didn't want you to think," he said, with great frankness, "that because I was reading Shakespeare I was a master of English. And I guess if I were to write up stuff in Hamlet's language I'd get canned for it."

"We'd probably have a deputation from the Moral Reform League," said the editor with a dry smile. "Just the same, if you know Shakespeare you know English, and we'll soon break you into the newspaper style."

So almost before he knew it Dave was on the staff of the Call. His beat comprised the police court, fire department, hotels and general pick-ups.

Dave almost immediately found the need of acquaintanceships. The isolation of his boyhood had bred in him qualities of aloofness which had now to be overcome. He was not naturally a good "mixer," he preferred his own company, but his own company would not bring him much news. So he set about deliberately to cultivate acquaintances with the members of the police force and the fire brigade and the clerks in the hotels. And he had to his character a quality of sincerity which gave him almost instant admission into their friendships. He had not suspected the charm of his own personality, and its discovery, feeding upon his new born enthusiasm for friendships, still further enriched the charm.

As his acquaintance with the work of the police force increased Dave found his attitude toward moral principles in need of frequent readjustment. By no means a Puritan, he had nevertheless two sterling qualities which so far had saved him from any very serious misstep. He practiced absolute honesty in all his relationships. His father, drunkard although he was in his later years, had never quite lost his sense of commercial uprightness, and Dave had inherited the quality in full degree. And Reenie Hardy had come into his life just when he needed a girl like Reenie Hardy to come into his life.

He often thought of Reenie Hardy, and of her compact with him, and wondered what the end would be. He was glad he had met Reenie Hardy. She was an anchor about his soul.

And Edith Duncan.

While the gradually deepening current of Dave's life flowed through the channels of coal heaver, freight handler, shipping clerk and reporter his waters were sweetened by the intimate relationship which developed between him and the members of the Duncan household. He continued his studies under Mr. Duncan's directions; two, three, and even four nights in the week found him at work in the comfortable den, or, during the warm weather, on the screened porch that overlooked the family garden. Mrs. Duncan, motherly, and yet not too motherly—she might almost have been an older sister—appealed to the young man as an ideal of womanhood. Her soft, well-modulated voice seemed to him to express the perfect harmony of the perfect home, and underneath its even tones he caught glimpses of a reserve of power and judgment not easily unbalanced. And as Dave's eyes would follow her the tragedy of his own orphaned life bore down upon him and he rebelled that he had been denied the start which such a mother could have given him.

"I am twenty years behind myself," he would reflect, with a grim smile. "Never mind. I will do three men's work for the next ten, and then we will be even."

And there was Edith—Edith who had burst so unexpectedly upon his life that first evening in her father's home. He had not allowed of himself any foolishness about Edith. It was evident Edith was pre-empted. Just as he was pre-empted, and the part of honor in his friend's house was to recognize the status quo.

Still, Mr. Allan Forsyth was unnecessarily self-assured. He might have made it less evident that he was within the enchanted circle while Dave remained outside. His complacency irritated Dave almost to rivalry. But the bon camaraderie of Edith herself checked any adventure of that kind.

She was of about the same figure as Reenie Hardy—a little slighter perhaps; not about the same age; and she had the same quick, frank eyes. And she sang wonderfully. He had never heard Reenie sing, but in some strange way he had formed a deep conviction that she would sing much as Edith sang. In love, as in religion, man is forever setting up idols to represent his ideals—and forever finding feet of clay.

Dave was not long in discovering that his engagement as couchman was a device, born of Mr. Duncan's kindness, to enable him to accept instruction without feeling under obligation for it. When he made this discovery he smiled quietly to himself and pretended not to have made it. To have acted otherwise would have seemed ungrateful to Mr. Duncan. And presently the drives began to have a strange attraction of themselves.

When they drove in the two-seated buggy on Sunday afternoons the party usually comprised Mrs. Duncan and Edith, young Forsyth and Dave. Mr. Duncan was interested in certain Sunday-afternoon meetings. It was Mrs. Duncan's custom to sit in the rear seat for its better riding qualities, and it had a knack of falling about that Edith would ride in the front seat with the driver. She caused Forsyth to ride with her mother, ostensibly as a courtesy to that young gentleman—a courtesy which, it may be conjectured, was not fully appreciated. At first he accepted it with the good nature of one who feels his position secure, but gradually that good nature gave way to a certain testiness of spirit which he could not entirely conceal.

The crisis was precipitated one fine Sunday in September, in the first year of Dave's newspaper experience. Dave called early and found Edith in a riding habit.

"Mother is 'indisposed,' as they say in the society page," she explained. "In other words, she doesn't wish to be bothered. So I thought we would ride today."

"But there are only two horses," said Dave.

"Well?" queried the girl, and there was a note in her voice that sounded

"Well?" Queried the Girl, and There Was a Note in Her Voice That Sounded Strange to Him.

strange to him. "There are only two of us."

"But Mr. Forsyth?"

"He is not here. He may not come. Will you saddle the horses and let us get away?"

It was evident to Dave that for some reason Edith wished to evade Forsyth this afternoon. A lovers' quarrel, no doubt. That she had a preference for him and was revealing it with the utmost frankness never occurred to his sturdy, honest mind. One of the delights of his companionship with Edith had been that it was a real companionship. None of the limitations occasioned by any sex consciousness had narrowed the sphere of their friendship. He felt for her. She was to him almost as another man, yet in no sense masculine. Save for a certain tender delicacy which her womanhood inspired, he came and went with her as he might have done with a man child of his own age. And when she preferred to ride without Forsyth it did not occur to Edith that she preferred to ride with him.

They were soon in the country, and Edith, leaning, swung from the road to a bridge trail that followed the winding of the river. As her graceful figure drifted on ahead it seemed more than ever reminiscent of Reenie Hardy. What rides they had had on those foothill trails! What dippings into the great cañons! What adventures into the spruce forests! And how long ago it all seemed! This girl, riding ahead, suggestive in every curve and pose of Reenie Hardy.

His eyes were burning with loneliness.

He knew he was dull that day, and Edith was particularly charming and vivacious. She teased him into conversation a dozen times, but he answered, absent-mindedly. At length she leaped from her horse and seated herself, facing the river, on a fallen log. Without looking back she indicated with her hand the space beside her, and Dave followed and sat down.

"You aren't talking today," she said. "You don't quite do yourself justice. What's wrong?"

"Oh, nothing," he answered, with a laugh, pulling himself together. "This September weather always gets me. I guess I have a streak of Indian; it comes of being brought up on the ranges. And in September, after the first frosts have touched the foliage—"

He paused, as though it was not necessary to say more.

"Yes, I know," she said quietly. Then, with a queer little note of confidence, "Don't apologize for it, Dave."

"Apologize?" and his form straightened. "Certainly not. . . . One doesn't apologize for nature, does he?"

But it comes back in September."

He smiled, and she thought the subconscious in him was calling up the smell of fire in dry grass; or perhaps even the rumble of buffalo over the hills. And he knew he smiled because he had so completely misled her.

It was dusk when they started homeward.

Forsyth was waiting for her. Dave scented stormy weather and excused himself early.

"What does this mean?" demanded Forsyth angrily as soon as Dave had gone. "Do you think I will take second place to that—that coat hanger?"

"That is not to his discredit," she said.

"Straight from the corral into good society," Forsyth sneered.

Then she made no pretense of compromise. "If you have nothing more to urge against Mr. Elden perhaps you will go."

Forsyth took his hat. At the door he paused and turned, but she was already ostensibly interested in a magazine. He went out into the night.

The week was a busy one with Dave and he had no opportunity to visit the Duncans. Friday Edith called him on the telephone. She asked an inconsequential question about something which had appeared in the paper, and from that the talk drifted on until it turned on the point of their expedition of the previous Sunday. Dave never could account quite clearly how it happened, but when he hung up the receiver he knew he had asked her to ride with him again on Sunday, and she had accepted. He had ridden with her before, of course, but he had never asked her before. He felt that a subtle change had come over their relationship.

He was at the Duncan house earlier than usual Sunday afternoon, but not too early for Edith. She was dressed for the occasion; she seemed more fetching than he had ever seen her.

She led the way over the path followed the Sunday before until again they sat by the rushing water. Dave had again been filled with a sense of Reenie Hardy, and his conversation was disjointed and uninteresting. She tried unsuccessfully to draw him out with questions about himself; then took the more astute tack of speaking of her own past life. It had begun in an eastern city, ever so many years ago—

Civility could not allow that to pass. "Oh, not so very many!" said Dave.

"How many?" she teased. "Guess."

"Nineteen," he hazarded.

"Oh, more than that."

"Twenty-one?"

"Oh, less than that." And their first confidence was established.

"Twenty," thought Dave to himself. "Reenie must be about twenty now."

"And I was five when—when Jack died," she went on. "Jack was my brother, you know. He was seven."

Well, we were playing, and I stood on the cur tracks, signaling the motor-man, to make him ring his bell. On came the cur, with the bell clanging, and the man in blue looking very cross. Jack must have thought I was waiting too long, for he suddenly rushed on the track to pull me off."

She stopped, and sat looking at the rushing water.

"I heard him cry, 'Oh, daddy, and—"

dy" above the screech of the brakes."

"Sorrow is a strange thing," she went on, after a pause. "I don't pretend to understand, but it seems to have its place in life. I guess it's a natural law. Well—"

She paused again, and when she spoke it was in a lower, more confidential tone.

"I shouldn't have told you this, Dave. I shouldn't know it myself. But before that things hadn't been—well, just as good as they might in our home. . . . They've been different since."

The shock of her words brought him upright. To him it seemed that Mr. and Mrs. Duncan were the ideal father and mother. It was impossible to associate them with a home where things "hadn't been just as good as they might." But her half-confession left no room for remark.

"Mother told me," she went on, after a long silence, and without looking at him. "A few years ago, if some one had only told me, when I was your age," she said.

"Who do you tell me that?" he suddenly demanded.

"Did you ever feel that you just had to tell some one?"

"I heard him cry, 'Oh, daddy, and—"

URGES PEOPLE TO FIGHT CATARRH WITH SIMPLE HOME MADE REMEDY

Can Make Pint at Home and Costs Little, Says Leading Druggist of Covington, Ky., Who Has Made Special Study of Catarrh.

Says: Inflamed Nostrils Invite Influenza

People who say that catarrh is a disease not to be taken seriously are harshly rebuked by a Kentucky druggist who has for years been much interested in the growth of this loathsome, yet altogether too common disease.

He claims that the sore, tender, inflamed membrane of the nostrils and throat is a prolific breeding ground for germs—not only the germs of influenza, but many other kinds as well.

If people would only stop experimenting for two weeks and try a simple remedy made of Mentholized Arceine mixed with enough boiled water to make a full pint, half of the catarrh in this country would be abolished.

It's really no joke for people who don't know about this simple recipe to be constantly sniffing and snuffling, blowing and hawking, when all these obnoxious symptoms as well as the foul discharge can be made to disappear in a few days.

Ask for three-quarters of an ounce of Mentholized Arceine—that's all you need and after you have mixed it with enough boiled water to make a pint, gargle the throat twice daily and sniff or spray some up the nostrils, as directed.

The tender nostrils will soon lose their soreness, heal up, and be clean and healthy.

Important Reminder: Just as soon as anyone in the family gets a cold in the head, check it at once with this same medicine.

NEWSY BATCH OF ITEMS FROM DUNBAR FOR WEEKEND READING

DUNBAR—Nov. 11—Owing to their inability on such short notice to prepare an adequate program for the observance of Armistice Day, the schools of Dunbar township including the high school will devote Friday afternoon to that purpose. Special programs replete with world war incidents and reminiscences have been prepared and will be appropriately rendered. The township schools will also observe Thanksgiving Day this year by allowing two holidays, Thursday and Friday November 27 and 28. Last year the day was not observed, but a special Thanksgiving Day program was rendered in which a history of the day was given from the first Thanksgiving day observed by the Pilgrims and including the Thanksgiving days proclaimed by General George Washington during the Revolution on down to the present. Their exhaustive study of the day gave them, according to their own confession, a knowledge of what the day was really for, and having learned its purpose and importance, from this time on it will be appropriately observed, and it is needless to say that the decision to observe it, meets with the hearty approval of the patrons of the schools.

Dunbar township high school has organized an orchestra of about 20 pieces, and from reports of teachers and pupils it is no mean aggregation. Among the students of the high school was found a number of good musicians and from these the orchestra has been organized. By constant practice the orchestra expects to be very efficient by the holidays, and it is quite probable that it will make its public debut at the Connellsville-Dunbar township institute this winter. In addition to giving the teachers of the city and township the benefit of enjoying their music, which it is hoped will be fully as good as, if not better than one hired from a distance, will lessen the expense and allow the employment of better instructors for the money available for institute purposes. And it will further increase local pride by demonstrating that home material is as good and acceptable as imported product. It is also proposed that a high school glee club be organized in order that the vocal musical ability of the school may have equal opportunity before the public.

They are really late autumn 1919 models, but like certain famous automobiles, they are so good all the year around and will be so much higher after next January that we are doing our best to make our patrons realize that a "1920 spring suit" bought now will be a wise investment. Had these suits been heavy weight materials, this would have been absurd, but they are of such fine broadcloths, duvet de laines, duvetyns, tricotines and mens' wear serges—all just as comfortable when the thermometer is hovering around 60 as when it's nearer 30—that we are making a special appeal to women who don't need a suit for wear just now to buy one for later.

We are still continuing the sale of special blouses, crepe de chine, georgettes and taffetas, in all the good suit shades as well as flesh and white, which are ordinarily $3.50, but which are selling now for $5.95.

CUTICURA HEALS BABY'S PIMPLES

On Head, Forehead and Face, Terribly Inflamed.

"When my baby was six weeks old I noticed a scale on her head that started in the form of small pimples, which dried in the form of a scale. The whole back of her head, forehead, and down both sides of her face was terribly inflamed. She did not have one hair on her head."

"My neighbor suggested that I try Cuticura, and I got them. I used one cake of Soap with two boxes of Ointment when she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. A. Levy, 3027 N. 25th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., July 7, 1918.
